Dial
A beautiful
New England
Christmas
story in the tradition of
Dylan Thomas'
remembrance,
A Child's Christmas in Wales. In December of 1940, twelve-
year-old
Donnie Hall
gets on a train
from his
comfortable
Connecticut
home to fulfill
a dream: to spend Christmas
with his grandparents
on their farm

on Eagle Pond
in south
central New Hampshire.
Once there,
he settles into
the routines
he knows well
from his
summer visits:
helping Gramps milk
the cows,
gathering
eggs from the
henhouse,
chopping
wood for the Glenwood in the kitchen.
But some things had changed.
Winter milk
was now
picked up not
by sleighs
drawn by work
horses on
snow-packed
roads, but by gasoline

powered trucks. The fancy old red
sleigh that had served
the family so
well was
languishing,
abandoned in
a stall in the barn, and, not far from it, Old Riley, the loyal horse that had pulled that sleigh, and
much else, for a quarter
century.
Donnie arrives
on a Sunday and is due to leave on Thursday. But
Wednesday
night, the
nor'easter
blows in and
the farm is buried in two feet of snow.
The road is unplowed; the car is useless. Will Donnie make it to the station in time to catch the train back to Boston? All this never happened. Donald Hall never did spend a childhood Christmas at Eagle Pond. But he knew all the stories from his mother and his grandparents and, now in his eighties, and having lived in that same house of his grandparents since 1975, he is in the perfect position to give himself "the thing I most wanted, a childhood Christmas at Eagle Pond." Ox-Cart Man [With Cassette] David R. Godine Publisher Hall's new poems further the themes of love, death, and mourning so powerfully introduced in "Without" (1999), but from the distance of passed time. These poems are by turns furious and resigned, spirited and despairing. In the end, the poet moves toward acceptance of new life in old age; eros against all odds. Kicking the Leaves Mariner Books In a long poem, the narrator looks back on his childhood and shares his attitudes toward the past Miss Rumphius Penguin His entire life, Donald Hall has dedicated himself to the written word, putting together a storied career as a poet, essayist, and memoirist. Now, in the unknown, unanticipated galaxy of very old age, he is writing essays that startle, move, and delight.

Hall takes readers on a tour of things he loves: baseball, the multipurposeness of the New Hampshire country store, poetry, and trees. Worth a Thousand Words Houghton Mifflin Harcourt A master of American letters collects forty years of writings on poetry in one essential volume The Happy Man Houghton Mifflin Harcourt A compelling collection of essays on the state of contemporary poetry The Back Chamber Beacon Press The revered American Poet Laureate reflects on the meaning of work, solitude, and love with "extraordinary nobility and wisdom" (The New York Times) When Donald Hall moved to his grandparents' New Hampshire farm in 1975, his work as a writer and a life devoted to the literary arts must have seemed remote from the harsh physical labor of his ancestors. However, he reveals a similar kind of artistry in the lives of his grandparents, Kate and Wesley. From them, he learned that the devotion to craft—be it canning vegetables, writing poems, or carting manure—creates its own special discipline and an ‘absorbedness’ that no wage can compensate. In this “sustained meditation on work as the key to personal happiness” (Los Angeles Times), we see how the writer has modeled his own life on his family’s lives of work, solitude, and love. When Hall comes face to face with his own mortality halfway through writing this book, we understand both his obsession with work and its ultimate consolation. Dictionary of Midwestern Literature, Volume 1 New

Alice made a promise to make the world a more beautiful place, then a seed of an idea is planted and blossoms into a beautiful plan. This beloved classic and celebration of nature—written by a beloved Caldecott winner—is lovelier than ever! Barbara Cooney's story of Alice Rumphius, who longed to travel the world, live in a house by the sea, and do something to make the world more beautiful, has a timeless quality that resonates with each new generation. The countless lupines that bloom along the coast of Maine are the legacy of the real Miss Rumphius, the Lupine Lady, who scattered lupine seeds everywhere she went. Miss Rumphius received the American Book Award in the year of publication. The illustrations have been reoriginated, going back to the original art to ensure state-of-the-art reproduction of Cooney's exquisite artwork. The art for Miss Rumphius has a permanent home in the Bowdoin College Museum of Art. Life Work HarperCollins Publishers Conflict dominates this book, and conflict unites it. The poetry here is an instrument for revelation and discovery. When the Sky Is Like Lace Penguin In these tender essays, Hall shares his memories and thoughts on growing up in New Hampshire on his grandparent's dairy farm, of the seasons, and of his connection to the land, his family, and his coming home. Kicking the Leaves Live Oak Media (NY)

 Beginning in 1983, Donald Hall and his late wife, poet Jane Kenyon, sent Christmas cards with one of Donald's poems (one year with a poem by Jane). The cards were illustrated by various artists and printed on a letterpress by New Hampshire publisher and printer Bill Ewert. These poems have been gathered in Winter Poems from Eagle Pond, together with a short introduction by Hall and two woodblock prints by artist Barry Moser. -- Donald Hall.
